NEBRASKA SPELLS "SPORTSMANSHIP"

The University of Nebraska is known and respected all over the nation for its red-attired fans, as well as its football teams.

Nebraska fans also have a nationwide reputation for good sportsmanship, at home and away.

"Big League—that's the way Nebraska teams and fans have acquitted themselves in past seasons, and that's the same goal for 1982.

The University of Nebraska urges all 1982 fans to continue this fine tradition of sportsmanship by extending courtesy to the visiting teams and officials.

All of us on the Cornhusker Staff salute our fans as the greatest in the nation and thank you for your support and sportsmanship.

Yours for Nebraska,

Huskers, Aggies Clash for Second Time

Before starting a rugged, three-game road trip, Coach Tom Osborne's Cornhuskers play their final non-conference home game this afternoon as they take on the New Mexico State Aggies of the Missouri Valley Conference. It's the second meeting in the intersectional series, and Nebraska is hoping for a repeat of its 57-0 romp here three years ago when the Huskers rolled up 569 yards' total offense.

The Aggies, however, would like nothing better than to come up with a good showing against a team which was ranked third in the wire service polls last week. To do so, though, Coach Gil Krueger's (pronounced KREE-ger) crew will have to reverse their bad luck of the last two weeks. NMSU comes into today's game at 0-2 after losing its opener to arch-rival Texas-El Paso, 20-17, in Las Cruces, Sept. 4, on a field goal with 13 seconds left in the game, and dropping a heart-breaking, 14-10 decision in the MVC opener at Indiana State last week. The Aggies led the Sycamores, 10-0, going into the final period, gave up two quick touchdowns to fall behind, 14-10, then saw a last-ditch drive end at the Sycamore five-yard-line as time ran out.

The Huskers, on the other hand, are coming in after an impressive, 42-7, opening-game win here last week over defending Big Ten co-champion Iowa. Against the Hawkeyes, the Huskers struck early and late in avenging a 10-7 loss at Iowa City last year. The Big Red took the opening kickoff and drove 80 yards to go up 7-0, then added another TD in the first quarter and two more in the second to lead, 28-0, at halftime. After Iowa pulled within 28-7 midway in the final period, the Huskers added two more TDs for the 42-7 win. Especially encouraging for the Husker followers was the play of the defense, which had six starters to replace—including all four backs—from last year's team. The Black Shirts came through better than most expected, holding a Hawkeye offense advertised as improved over 1981 to 190 total yards (and just one yard and one first down in the first half).

Craig Could Top 2,000

If New Mexico State is to improve over its 1979 showing against the Huskers, there is one player whom they hope isn't as active as he was the last time the Aggies and Nebraska hooked up. That player is senior punter Marc Brandt, who punted 12 times as a freshman (for a 33.8 average) in that game, tying the NMSU school record for most punts in one game. Brandt is one of a handful of players still around who saw action in that game, including Nebraska I-back/fullback Roger Craig, who carried the ball for the first time in his college career, rushing for 24 yards on four carries. That performance started the senior from Davenport, Iowa, toward one of the most-successful careers any Husker runner has enjoyed. Craig comes into today's game with 1,917 career yards, and he could become the eighth Husker to top the 2,000-yard career mark. He's a serious threat to become Nebraska's all-time rushing leader and needs to average 81.6 yards per game over the Huskers' final 11 games to top I.M. Hipp's record of 2,814.

Today's game is the final home game for the Big Red for nearly a month, as the Huskers are on the road for the next three Saturdays. Next week, they start one of the toughest doubles a Nebraska team has faced in years, as they play at Penn State, Sept. 25, followed by a game at vastly-improved Auburn, Oct. 2. After that, it's off to Boulder to face Colorado and new Coach Bill McCartney, Oct. 9, before returning to Lincoln to host Kansas State in an Oct. 16 Homecoming game.

One of the groups most instrumental in helping the University of Nebraska Athletic Department grow in the field of intercollegiate sports is the Nebraska Touchdown Club.

Contributions from TD Club members have enabled the Cornhuskers to build a fine grant-in-aid program and continued support from the Touchdown Club, and groups like the Husker Achievement Awards, the Extra Point Club, and the Cornhusker Beef Club, will insure that the Nebraska Cornhuskers will always hold a prominent place in the college sports world.

The University of Nebraska Athletic Department salutes the many members of the Touchdown Club and takes this opportunity to say a sincere "Thank You."

Donors Support Research

To a large extent, the academic recognition of a major university such as the University of Nebraska-Lincoln is built upon the quality of its teaching, research and service. In turn, these efforts depend heavily upon the quality of faculty and the availability of excellent facilities and equipment.

Today, research at the University is both highly sophisticated and expensive. In many cases, neither state nor federal funds provide the kinds of facilities or equipment essential to the latest research in agriculture, engineering, the natural, the physical or the social sciences.

We at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln are justifiably proud of the role that so many private donors have played in helping UNL support research.

The variety of contributions private donors have made to research programs at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln is indeed impressive.

For example, the gift by Pete and Abbie Gudmundsen, of the 12,000-acre Sandhills Ranch near Whitman, Nebraska, has provided UNL's Institute for Agriculture and Natural Resources with a unique facility for research. Dedicated in 1981 as the Gudmundsen Sandhills Research Center, the ranch makes available to generations of students and scientists an exceptional real-life setting for discovery and study, relating to the range-livestock industry.

Another endowment made by Mr. and Mrs. James C. Coe of Phoenix, Arizona, offers the promise of state-of-the-art equipment to researchers in the College of Engineering and Technology and Business Administration. Over the next 25 years, both colleges will receive a total of about $5.9 million in new equipment because of the designated private gift support.

These gifts are outstanding examples of the degree to which private philanthropy can help UNL enhance its distinguished reputation as a comprehensive, graduate research institution.

Gifts such as these help UNL maintain its distinction among the great universities of our nation.

RED LOBSTER IS BIG ON THE BIG RED

What's even better than heading out to the stadium to watch the Big Red win big? Heading over to Red Lobster after the game to celebrate the victory.

At Red Lobster we make the sweet taste of victory even sweeter with a full menu of all your favorites: shrimp, scallops, lobster, steak, just to name a few. Plus beer, wine, cocktails and our specialty drinks.

So come join us at Red Lobster after today's Big Red victory. From the stadium just drive straight east on "O" Street to 66th Street. You can't miss us. At Red Lobster we're big on Big Red victories. No wonder so many Big Red fans are big on us.

Budweiser LIGHT

BEER

Worthy of the King of Beers.

There's a tradition at Anheuser-Busch. A tradition that says never be satisfied until you've achieved the best. Now, out of this tradition, comes a light beer worthy of the King of Beers. One with a clean, distinctive taste. Budweiser Light.

It took time. Patience. And a quest for quality that led to the proud list of ingredients and the Beechwood Aging process made famous by the King of Beers.

We know the best never comes easy. That's why there's nothing else like it.

Bring out your best.™

Punters & Placekickers to Watch in 1982

by Ron Bergman,
OAKLAND TRIBUNE

Iowa's Reggie Roby set an NCAA record with his 49.8 yards-per-punt average.

The Hungarian revolution may have had more effect on United States college football than on Hungary, as things turned out. Hungary is still living under the same political system, but college football never will be the same.

Before the Hungarian uprising in 1956, college football coaches called for volunteer kickers and tried to spot players who looked as if they had what were known as "good legs," which meant something different to the coaches than to producers of Broadway musicals.

Linemen such as Lou Groza at Ohio State and Jim "Truck" Cullom at California, ends such as Gordy Soltau at Minnesota and backs such as Paul Hornung at Notre Dame handled (foot-led?) the placekicking chores and were thought to have done good jobs.

Then came the Gogolak brothers, sons of a psychiatrist who fled Hungary during the revolution. Pete kicked for Cornell and Charlie for Princeton in the 1960s. Another revolution had started.

The Grozas and Culloms and all those heavy-legged types kicked straight ahead. They didn't know any better because it was the only way once the football was elongated to the point where drop kicking became impractical.

The Gogolaks were different. Soccer, not football, had been their game. They approached the ball from somewhere off to the side and kicked it with their insteps with a leg-whipping motion. Un-American became American for a game that, ironically, had evolved from soccer—which started when entire English villages kicked pig bladders over miles of distance.

Lighter humans with faster legs could kick footballs farther. It was like thin-handled bats replacing thick-handled bats in baseball or fiber glass replacing bamboo in pole vaulting.

Conventional kickers are gradually disappearing into folklore, or perhaps a niche in the Smithsonian. As recently as seven years ago, according to National Collegiate Athletic Association statistics, conventional kickers outnumbered soccer stylists, 116-70.

By 1977, the gap narrowed to where there were only two more conventionalists than soccer-style kickers. But by last season, 138 college soccer-style placekickers attempted 1,787 Division 1-A field goals compared to 50 conventional kickers who tried only 367.

The growth of soccer as a youth sport in this country has led to a greater emphasis on the kicking portion of football, better accuracy and an incredible increase in field goals.

In 1951, for instance, only 53 field goals were kicked in 606 college games. Ten years later, in 1961, 277 field goals were kicked in 606 games. In 1971, a total of 781 field goals were kicked in 726 games. Last year, 1,360 three-pointers were made in 788 games.

Chuck Nelson of Washington won all-conference honors last season.

There also seem to be more freshmen who can step in with poise and ignore pressure. The two leading field goal kickers of last season, Kevin Butler of Georgia and Larry Roach of Oklahoma State, were just freshmen, as was Luis Zendejas of Arizona State, who shared tenth place.

All are soccer-style kickers, as are Peter Kim of Alabama, ninth last year, and Chuck Nelson of Washington, the other tenth-placer along with Zendejas.

Butler and Roach share the NCAA frosh record of 19 field goals. Butler, from Stone Mountain, Ga., also owns the all-time Southeastern Conference and Georgia season field goal records.

PUNTERS AND PLACEKICKERS

TCU's Jim Gargus carries on the tradition of fine kickers in the Southwest Conference.

Roach, a B-plus average geology student, already holds the Big Eight Conference season record for field goal accuracy at 68 percent. He won three games for the Cowboys last year and kicked a 56-yarder against Kansas.

Kim, a 5-8, 164-pound Korean, decided to transfer to Alabama from Hawaii following his freshman year after he watched the Crimson Tide on television. The very accurate—he hit seven of nine from 30-to-39 yards last season—Kim lost a chance to be a hero against Mississippi State when he was injured on a point-after-touchdown. His substitute, freshman Terry Sanders, a conventional kicker, won the game, 13-10, with a 28-yard field goal.

Zendejas made all 45 of his PATs in 1981 and didn't miss on his first nine field goal tries. Down the road from Arizona State, in Tucson, the University of Arizona was impressed enough to recruit his brother, Max, for this year.

Despite his glittering record, Zendejas didn't make all-conference. That honor went to Washington's Nelson, an Academic All-America who kicked two field goals longer than 50 yards in 1981. A senior this year, Nelson also contributed in the clutch. His 21-yard field goal with 11 seconds left beat California, 27-26, and kept the Huskies on the road to the Rose Bowl.

Down in Tulsa, Okla., there's a pleasant problem because two excellent kickers are available. Stu Crum was all set for another great campaign last year when he came up with a detached retina playing tennis that kept him out for the season. Crum had hit on 79 of 80 PATs in his first three seasons, had kicked a 58-yard field goal and three over 50 yards.

Tulsa found another kicker handling the team laundry. He is Jason Staurovsky, one of three team managers. Staurovsky didn't miss a single point-after in 35 attempts and made good on eight of 12 field goals, including a 46-yarder. He'll redshirt this year to give Crum a final shot.

Other placekickers to watch this season:

Pete Parks is a small (5-8 and 150 pounds) conventional kicker from New Mexico who disdains a tee. His field goals of 23, 35, 43 and 45 yards in the second half helped upset Brigham Young, 25-21, in 1980.

Jess Atkinson, 5-9 and 155 pounds, was downcast for a while when he didn't make the Maryland soccer team two years ago as a freshman. So he turned out for football last season and shared the Atlantic Coast Conference scoring title with 60 points.

Steve Jordan is carrying on the family tradition at Southern California. He's the younger brother of former Trojan kicker Frank Jordan. Frank beat UCLA in 1977 with a last-second field goal. Steve, who didn't miss an extra point as a freshman last year, came through with a PAT that was the deciding point in the 22-21 victory over UCLA.

Paul Woodside walked on as a freshman last year for West Virginia. He didn't get many opportunities during the regular season, but went wild in the Peach Bowl. His four field goals, including a 49-yarder against Florida, set a Peach Bowl record.

Mark Harmon, no relation to the legendary Tom, had his first full season last year for Stanford. Both his parents have helped him practice in the off-season since he was in high school. Dad shags. Mom holds. "She had the better touch," Mark explained.

For those who yearn for the past, there's Phil Denfield, the all-ACC tight end from Wake Forest. Just like those heroes of earlier days, Denfield also place kicked, making all 22 of his extra points and seven of eight field goals. He's a strong 6-5 and 220 pounds.

Dana Moore of Mississippi State and Chris Mangold of Oregon State also are throwbacks to earlier eras. They both placekick and punt.

Moore, who'll be a senior this year, has kicked the deciding field goal in five games during his career. In the last Hall of Fame Game, he kicked a 22-yard field goal and a PAT as Mississippi State beat Kansas, 10-0. He also set two punting records for that bowl game, one for a 74-yard punt, the other for an average of 49.9 yards. That's kicking your team out of trouble.

Mangold was a three-sport star at St.

Chris Norman of South Carolina booted one 75 yards in 1981.

Mary's High, Medford, Ore., where he also played defensive back. At Oregon State, his best game last year came against Minnesota when he kicked a 52-yard field goal and a 65-yard punt.

Reggie Roby of Iowa used to be a two-way kicker. Now he's not even a two-way punter; but he kicks off for the Hawkeyes every time. Roby set an all-time NCAA record last year with a 49.8-yard average and earned All-America honors.

But when the Hawkeyes crossed the 50, Tom Nichol was brought in because he did a better job of dropping punts inside the 10. Roby, 6-3 and 215 pounds, originally was recruited as a tight end. He also used to be the Iowa placekicker, but lost that job, too, as his responsibilities narrowed to what he does better than anyone else in the country.

Jim Arnold does all the punting for Vanderbilt. He can boom the ball and pooch it. An example of boom was a 79-yard punt last year against Mississippi that actually traveled 100 yards from the point of contact before it rolled up against a fence.

John Kidd of Northwestern had plenty of chances in 1981 because the winless Wildcats had problems getting out of their own territory. He set a school record with 79 punts, averaged 41.9 yards a kick and had one go 74 yards.

Tennessee sophomore Jimmy Colquitt, nephew of former Volunteer punter Craig Colquitt, had 21 fewer punts than Kidd and averaged 43.8 yards a kick. His seven punts for a 49-yard average against Alabama was his best day.

USC has a good one in Dave Pryor.

Pryor's potential was apparent eight years ago when he won the National Punt, Pass and Kick competition during halftime at the Super Bowl at the age of 13. Only 15 of his 51 punts from scrimmage were returned for a total of only 66 yards.

Chris Norman of South Carolina set a school record last year as a sophomore with a 43.2-yard punting average, including a 75-yarder. He has broken almost all the records set by former Gamecock Max Runager.

Mike Black of Arizona State, who made the All-Pac-10 team for the second time, had one of his better games in a losing effort against UCLA. Four of his punts were downed, respectively, at the Bruins' 11, 5, 4, and 1-yard line.

But no punter ever had a game like sophomore Joe Satriano did for Army against heavily-favored Navy. He set an all-time NCAA record by averaging 57.6 yards per punt, including a 79-yarder that was the longest in Army history. Three of his punts were downed inside the 9, including one on the 1-yard line, allowing Army to tie the Midshipmen, 3-3.

At Alabama, punter Malcolm Simmons will be returning as a junior. A walk-on last season, he led the Southeast Conference in punting with 60 kicks for a 43.9-yard average, no kicks blocked and his longest punt a 73-yarder.

Nebraska's Grant Campbell chalked up a school record last year with a 43.4-yard average—which also ranked him second in the Big Eight and 18th nationally. Campbell's longest punt was 68 yards and he had just one punt blocked.

TCU coach F. A. Dry calls James Gargus, "the most talented punter I've ever coached or been associated with." In his freshman performance last year he broke a 46-year-old TCU record set by the legendary Sammy Baugh.

At Penn State Ralph Giacomarro, a junior last year, holds nearly all of the school's punting records. Known as a consistent kicker, he broke his own records in '81, averaging 43.5 yards per punt and a 41.3-yard net average.

Halfway across the continent, Bucky Scribner is returning for his third and last year at Kansas after two straight seasons of making the All-Big-Eight team as the conference's leading punter. Last year, 20 of his punts stopped inside the opponents' 20, and 23 punts traveled 50 yards or more.

And none of them had anything to do with the Hungarian Revolution.

Bucky Scribner of Kansas is one of the Big Eight's premier punters.

Big Eight Football Season Preview

by Randy York, Lincoln (Neb.)
JOURNAL AND STAR

When the Big Eight sent five 1981 football teams into post-season bowl games, conference coaches, players, fans and media asked the same question—what can the league possibly do for an encore?

Well, how about six bowl teams? Or seven? Can anyone be so preposterous to consider eight?

Yes, it sounds as outrageous as beating a crooked gambling casino. But if you analyze the returning talent in the Big Eight, all 1981 lower-division teams should have upper-division dreams. And if an upper-division finish means what it meant last year, the season will not end in November.

Overall, the conference returns 117 starters from '81. That figure ranges from a high of 18 at Kansas State (25, if you count seven 1980 redshirted starters) to a low of 12 at defending champion Nebraska.

Oklahoma State returns 17 starters from its Independence Bowl team. Iowa State returns 15 starters from the team that upset Iowa and Missouri and tied Oklahoma. Colorado also returns 15 starters.

Kansas returns 14 starters from its Hall of Fame Bowl team. That number increases to 15, if you count Kerwin Bell, the All-Big Eight tailback who was red-shirted because of knee surgery.

Missouri returns 13 starters from its Tangerine Bowl championship team. Oklahoma also returns 13 starters from its Sun Bowl championship outfit. Nebraska's 12 starters are from a team that came within a whisker of a possible national championship in the Orange Bowl.

Here's the team-by-team breakdown of Big Eight talent this fall:

Reading Defenses

by Bill Lyon, Philadelphia INQUIRER

You can do your own income tax return so fast that the IRS thinks you're a computer. You can solve Rubik's Cube on your coffee break. You explain the theory of nuclear fission just for fun. So, whiz, try this one: You've called a down-and-out to your wide receiver, who starts out slotted inside the wingback and then goes in motion toward the weak side. In the meantime, the defense has shifted from a 5-2 to a 4-4, the tackles look like they're pinching for an inside rush, the ends may try a loop with the outside linebackers and the cornerbacks look like they're rolling up into a zone. But the strong safety is cheating a half step to the left. What do you do now?

Time's up.

Yes, just like that. Either you've diagnosed the defense and called the proper audible and the play breaks all the way, or you've been suckered in by the defense, fallen for a false look and the result is a three-yard loss, your teammates are re-huddling with their heads down, your coach is recalling your scholarship and 60,000 fanatics in the stands want you as the guest of honor at a necktie party.

From up in the second deck, it looks easy enough. With the benefit of the slow motion replay, it looks ridiculously easy. Being a quarterback, reading the defense, hey, it's like picking out that big, black "E" on top of the eye chart.

Actually, it may be simpler to decipher the Dead Sea Scrolls. Or break a hopelessly complex code.

"There are," agrees one college football coach, "a lot of things you look for in a quarterback. Is he a leader? Does he have a live arm? Can he keep his cool? Does he have the size? But you know what the most important quality is? A feel for the game. In other words, can he read defenses? We're talking football smarts here, a QB who knows what the other team likes to do, tends to do, in certain situations.

"We can draw up the fanciest X's and O's going, we can put in a game plan that looks like creative genius, but if we don't have a quarterback who can think on his feet, we're dead in the water."

Reading defenses ... it is a special skill that involves instantaneous recognition, and then equally swift reaction. What it means, simply, is knowing what the other guy intends to do before he does it. And then attacking him before he can adjust.

It is said that ability is the mark of a mature quarterback, and obviously it is acquired only through experience. Still, reading defenses is a technique that can be learned.

"Every once in a while you'll get a player who just seems to have the knack for it," says one coach. "It's like a sixth sense, an instinct. Every football game develops a rhythm, a certain flow of its own. If your quarterback can pick that up, make it work to your advantage, you've got a big edge over the other guy.

"Of course, we're not talking free-lance stuff here. Reading a defense comes from thorough preparation. What you do after you read it is improvisation, but within a certain set framework. It's not like you're playing down at the corner lot and drawing up plays in the dirt."

Remember that old saying "what you see is what you get?" That doesn't necessarily apply in reading a defense, for it will use disguise, subterfuge, try to convince the quarterback that a safety blitz is coming when in fact there is a completely different stratagem in the works.

Coaches, quarterbacks and those analysts up in the booth are forever talking about "keys." They sound like a convention of locksmiths. Yet that is where reading a defense begins.

"You can't check on all 11 players on defense when you break the huddle. There just isn't enough time," explains one coach. "Besides, some of them may be deliberately giving off false keys; you read the cornerback as playing man-to-man but when the ball is snapped, they have rolled up into a zone and the guy you figured would have single coverage is getting doubled instead.

"So that's where scouting and game films come in. The scouting report and the film, that's the starting point for reading a defense. You park your quarterback in front of the projector and he watches the defense until he's about one blink away from blindness. What you're looking for is a tendency. Every play is different in one sense, but defenses tend to play a certain way according to the situation, according to down, distance, position on the field, what time it is in the game. What you try to do is determine what they are liable to do in such a situation, based on what they have done in the past.

"Most teams," the coach continues, "will play an entirely different style when they have you backed up inside your own 20 than they will when you're inside their 20. You can almost see defensive philosophies change as the line of scrimmage moves from one side of the 50-yard line to the other."

So the scouts and the coaches and the quarterbacks run and re-run and re-run films and pore over charts that tell them what the defense likes to do on third-and-long on your own 37 when it's late in the third quarter. In the past, they relied on human power alone. Now it's become more sophisticated.

"Just about every team uses a computer now," notes one coach. "Is there a college that doesn't have at least a dozen of the things? You can feed in the information and have a readout so early in the week that you can put in your game plan by Tuesday. It's a heckuva lot more intricate than it used to be. So are the defenses. Players are smarter these days and I'd like to think coaches are, too.

"Used to be, you'd get ready for one team and you only had to worry about one basic defense. This team, for example, played a wide-tackle-six defense come hell or high water. But today they'll mix things up, change around from play to play.

"It's a whole lot tougher being a quarterback. Other defenses will chart themselves, too. They'll feed what they do into their own computer, try to avoid being stereotyped. They want to make it hard for you to get a true reading on them. Of course, sometimes you can get too tricky for your own good. You can out-smart yourself."

In the manual of football clichés, first a quarterback reads the defense, and then what does he do? Why, if he is successful, he then "picks it apart." We hear that incessantly every Saturday. So let's assume our quarterback has done all his homework, watched the films, read the printouts, committed all the proper keys to memory. He has called the play, broken the huddle, strode briskly to the line of scrimmage, begins calling the signals and suddenly the defense shifts into something he's never seen before.

Now what? Waste a timeout? Call dial-a-prayer? Hope what has been called will work anyway?

"If he's a good quarterback," says another coach, "he'll call an audible. He'll change the play right at the line by yelling a code number, or maybe a color. A lot of people have a mistaken idea of what an audible is. They used to be rare. But the game has changed and the quarterback is given a wider latitude. When we send in a play from the bench, it's just going to be a suggestion with basic information; that is, a run or a pass. But the quarterback can option off it. He may still stick with a run, depending on how the defense is lined up, but he may change the back who's going to carry it, the hole it's supposed to go through, and how the blocking goes."

The game of football goes in cycles. For a while the offense dominates. Then the defense catches up and scoring goes down. Then the offense reasserts itself.

"It's still a game of the basics," insists one long-time coach. "It comes down to who blocks and who tackles the best. I hear people talking about 'pursuit.' What they mean is go catch 'em. Somebody will come up with an offense that's supposed to revolutionize the game, but then you find out it's not really new, just a refinement of something they were running 30 years ago. Same with defense. There's only so many ways to come at you.

"So what I want is a quarterback who knows how they're going to come after him, and what to do about it. We give him all the help we can, and then hope for the best.

"If you've got yourself a youngster at QB, then you hope the first time he makes a read and calls an audible that it's a big gainer. Nothing will help a quarterback's confidence like making the right decision and then you bust a big one. It tends to help him pay attention real good the next time you have a scouting meeting."

Quarterbacks themselves will tell you there is no greater natural high than correctly dissecting a defense, picking out at first glance the weakness, and then attacking it by creating a numerical advantage. Translation: Get four people to the spot where the defense has only three. Result: Six points. The quarterback, exultant, feels as though he has just solved the meaning of E equals MC squared.

But what do you call a team with a quarterback who cannot read the defense?

"Generally," said the coach, wryly, "a loser."

offensive players should present a more explosive threat.

Former CU coach Chuck Fairbanks considered the Buffs' linebackers, led by Sandy Armstrong to be the No. 1 strength of the team. Armstrong recorded 54 tackles as a sophomore nose-guard, but Fairbanks finally had the luxury to move him back to inside linebacker, his natural position, last spring.

The Buffs are also fortified in the secondary with the entire two-deep lineup returning from last year's season-ending win over Kansas State. Among them is junior strong safety Jeff Donaldson, who was credited with 83 tackles. Cornerbacks Victor Scott and Clyde Riggins, who led the Big Eight with five interceptions, also return.

CU is blessed with two competent quarterbacks in Randy Essington, who had a 345-yard passing game in a win over Texas Tech, and Steve Vogel, who came off the bench to spark a dramatic upset over Oklahoma State.

Lee Rouson, Colorado's leading rusher with 656 yards and leading scorer with six touchdowns, provides solid inside running. Guy Egging appears to be coming into his own as a junior fullback after an excellent spring.

IOWA STATE

When Donnie Duncan talks about "The Great Wall," he's referring to his offensive line, one of the more veteran units in the Big Eight this fall.

The Cyclones return three fifth-year seniors, including Karl Nelson, the 6-6, 262-pound All-Big Eight offensive tackle. The other two vets are guard Ted Clapper and center Jim Meyer. Junior Bruce Reimers is a fourth returning starter at offensive guard.

Iowa State's keys to success, however, are the players who will line up behind all that experience and a quarterback and tailback are not among the Cyclones' 15 returning starters. Duncan's No. 1 mission, therefore, is finding replacements for All-Big Eight players John Quinn and Dwayne Crutchfield.

Junior split end Michael Wade, the team leader with 27 receptions for 343 yards last year, may be ISU's foremost offensive threat.

Defensively, the Cyclones are stockpiled with nine returning starters, including 6-4, 276-pound defensive tackle Shamus McDonough. He had a 21-tackle game against Nebraska and a 16-tackle performance against Kansas.

Junior linebacker Chris Washington is another top returnee. He led the Cyclones last season with 168 tackles, 110 of which were unassisted. Senior free safety Ronnie Osborne, who led the secondary with 78 stops, also returns.

KANSAS

Barring unforeseen catastrophe, the Jayhawks seem destined to field one of the most talented offensive teams in the conference, if not the country.

In addition to returning all of his receivers and all but one running back, Linebacker Will Cokeley anchors the Kansas State defense.

Don Fambrough says he has "one of the best, if not the best, quarterback around" in California native Frank Seurer.

Last year, Seurer led the Jayhawks in total offense with 1,130 yards before suffering a dislocated elbow against Missouri and missing the bowl game.

His effectiveness should be enhanced by the return of Bell, who rushed for 1,114 yards as a freshman. KU was counting on a repeat sophomore performance until Bell suffered a knee injury in the third game.

The Jayhawks also feature the return of Wayne Capers, the 6-2, 200-pound All-Big Eight wide receiver, who led the league with 36 catches for 629 yards and four touchdowns.

KU's balance was triggered by an unexpected superlative performance from a young offensive line that included tackles Reggie Smith and Rennie Atkins and guard K.C. Brown.

Fambrough's No. 1 rebuilding task is replacing his top two linebackers and shoring up a defense that graduated six starters. Helping that cause will be two-time all-conference punter Bucky Scribner.

KANSAS STATE

Now is the time for the results of one of the boldest experiments in Big Eight football history—the redshirting of eight bona fide leaders from the previous year's team.

Jim Dickey did it to help the Wildcats shake the dregs of consistent lower-division finishes. If the experiment is successful, Dickey will be prime Coach of the Year material. If it isn't, he says he's ready to sell cars in Houston.

THE QUARTERBACK IS AN ACTOR, TOO

by Art Rosenbaum, San Francisco CHRONICLE

The overture is complete. The play is about to begin. The great director stands in the wings, pointing and shouting instructions. Now come the players, attired in their gladiator costumes. We are about to witness a grand drama enacted by many characters—the tall and the short, the wide and the lean, a supporting cast of 10 on one side and 11 on the other, plus (pause for applause) the Quarterback.

In football, the school bands may blast and the coach may be the fount of knowledge but the star of the show is that person on whom all eyes are turned. The quarterback is the lead thespian because the focus of this theatrical is an oval ball which always goes to him when the major scenes—the first downs and touchdowns—are being enacted.

Football's world is a stage and all the players must be actors. It is honest deception in a sense, since each side knows the intent is to pretend one thing but do another. The wide receiver darting out for a pass will fake in one direction and suddenly veer to a different lane. The tight end will purposely fall while blocking down but quickly arise to snare a pre-planned pass. Linemen will indicate, by stance or eye contact, a direction they won't necessarily take.

From the opposite side, linebackers will be searching through the face guard of a running back for an expression or a glance that will hint of a pass or run upcoming. The corners and safety will be "cheating" a step or two to invite an offensive mistake. It is a continuing charade, a series of choreographed signals, a combination of repetitive actions and reactions.

The QB must be the great deceiver, the artiste in motion, the dominant actor. He is the cynosure of all eyes. His audience (i.e. the defense) seeks his giveaway tips. Does he instinctively repeat certain motions that foretell the next scene? A flub or a misstep could prove his undoing. His role is fraught with subtleties. If he should notice a weakness to be exploited, nothing in his manner should indicate his discovered wisdom. The defense always offers behavioral keys, to be duly noted and carefully filed away for use when necessary. Meantime, the action continues, or should we say "act."

There is the fake handoff, a routine practiced so often it can be underestimated, or underplayed. No QB dare overlook this opportunity for mummery when he notes, for example, a bunching on the defensive right side in anticipation of a running play. Having so noted, our QB by sign or voice may advise his cast of characters to posture for the supposed run to that right side, after which he as lead player will act out his devilment—a turn, a switch of hands, a quick but studied placement of the tan leather ball alongside his tan-colored pants to create a blend, then a simulated handoff which combines with the seemingly eager acceptance of the vanishing ball by the runner, and voila, the situation has become a play-action pass that, hopefully, will have lured at least one defender into the wrong part of the "theatre."

Pros use computers. Now some college classes, equipped with electronic gear, are using the football team's maneuvers as a study form. From trivial input, the machines may deliver significant answers: does the QB hold his hands or his feet in a certain manner every time when a pass play is coming ... what is his repeating reaction when the strong safety moves a few steps to the left ... how much variance is there in the cadence of his signal calling? And on and on.

Such information becomes important in detecting QB tipoffs. It could also assist in self-analysis to determine if the home school's QB wunderkind is subject to such aberrations.

No five yards in football is more easily acquired than drawing the other team offside. This is where the QB is at his comic best, looking carefully along the line of scrimmage as though studying each defensive lineman and linebacker, gazing into the distance for the positions of the secondary, strongly enunciating each bark of his signals. Then comes the cadence break, or a hesitation, or a voice change that cries of sudden urgency. Whatever it may be, it can lure and lull at the same time. Only the finest actors can constantly

continued

Does he have the ball or doesn't he? Only the offense knows for sure.

The quarterback practices deception through sideways glances that both lure and lull.

pull the offside-draw, the precious break that brings the goal line five yards closer.

Fakery is not always the answer. After all, football is a contact game and a QB may have instructions to let the opponents know this is going to be a very physical day. The QB may even want to advise, by positioning or obvious signals, that the ball will be rushed directly to this or that point. The message: we're going to blow you out! It takes an actor to be a straight man, too.

The quarterback inherited his title from an earlier era when there were four backs who took positions one behind the other. The QB was one-fourth of the distance beyond the center, the two halfbacks half the distance, the fullback all the way back. Early quarterbacks were signal callers but mainly blockers for halfbacks, later known as tailbacks, who took the ball on a direct snap from center and then ran, passed or punted. Hence the term, "triple threat."

The modern quarterback does start closest to the center, so close that night club comics have wondered about the relationship. But upon receiving the ball the QB is center stage, the man of the moment, the one everyone wants—especially the defensive end or the blitzing safety.

Successful quarterbacks get all the acclaim. In college they learn the answers for the inquiring media, they are sought out for autographs and are even met at the stage door (the locker room exit) by those of the opposite sex.

So, one may inquire, what sort is this person who makes all the passes? Listen to an honest casting director—that is, a coach or recruiter—for his idea of the ideal.

"You have to understand about star actors," says Mr. Honest Coach, "they can fool you. Take the physical side. There are a ton of high school seniors able to throw the ball a mile, and quite a few who can win the Pass and Punt contest by hitting the accuracy line. Many have the size and enough speed and courage to qualify. But there's a certain quality one discovers early. Like an actor or actress who can fill a room when making an entrance, this star quarterback can light up a huddle.

"It's like Darrell Royal once said when coaching at Texas, he couldn't define the qualities but could always identify a quarterback-type in a crowd. I've seen actors who don't rehearse well or who seem burdened by their own thoughts and responsibilities, yet when it's time to perform they radiate. My first requisite for a quarterback, beyond solid physical credentials, is intelligence. I don't want him to blow his lines when the play begins. Next, I'd like a fellow who even as an actor is concerned with things as they are, with the reality of a situation and who by a certain dominance or presence can convey to all around him that he is in control and is more than willing to have a go at solving that real problem.

"I mean that when he combines intelligence with courage, when he says 'let's have a go at it,' the 'it' in this case is whatever is needed to move from one scene to the next, from one act to another and eventually to a triumphant curtain.

"I'll tell you when he must do his best acting—when we are getting the hell kicked out of us. There's no room for self-pity or complaining. He's the traditional captain of the ship and nobody leaves before he says so, and he last of all. I said it was acting, but any powerful actor is at his best when he's living his role."

John Brodie, former Stanford All-America, 49er All-Pro and something of a thespian himself on national network sports television, tells of his first meeting with Joe Montana, this year's darling of pro quarterbacks following the 49ers' Super Bowl victory.

"It was at a celebrity banquet when Joe was finishing at Notre Dame," Brodie reflected, "and we happened to be sitting together. We chatted for perhaps 40 minutes. I began to understand why he was so highly regarded by his college coaches. It was his attitude, you might say his sense of efficiency. You know, it isn't only the spiral a passer puts on the ball, or the length of his throw, or how he scrambles out of the pocket or even the way he reads defenses. It is all of those things, yes, but it's the other thing, the intangible. It's a feeling of wanting to be at the core of the action, to be right in front of the footlights, so to speak. It's a feeling of command, it's maybe a little arrogance along with his cool. I knew Joe was an actor."

Well, it takes an actor to know an actor. Brodie also had that intangible, that unidentifiable something, that Oscar-winning manner.

25-Year Flashback

THE 1957 SEASON

by Furman Bisher,
The Atlanta JOURNAL

On a day of benevolent weather in December, 1957, I chauffeured Ted Smits, then sports editor of all The Associated Press, to Auburn, Ala., to an award delivery. He was to be the main attraction at an open-air observance celebrating Auburn University's climb to the highest peak in college football. The Tiger team had been voted No. 1 in the nation by the AP's electorate of writers and broadcasters, and was to receive from Smits himself the annual award for such glorious achievement.

He had come from New York by air, and was then dispatched by way of Roanoke, Wadley, Five Points and other points to the pleasant little town in the rolling land of east Alabama. Spirit rode high. Thousands came to Cliff Hare Stadium for the passing of the trophy from Smits to Coach Ralph (Shug) Jordan. Legal or illegal, it was a holiday in Auburn.

Peculiarly, this event would exert extraordinary influence on the health of football on the campus of Auburn's most bitter rival, Alabama, and as it will be seen, on the course of the game in the South and the nation for years to come. Auburn had humiliated Alabama by 40 points in the final game of its unbeaten season. Shell-shocked Alabama had swiftly defrocked Coach J.B. Whitworth, known mainly as "Ears," and put in a call to Paul Bryant, known by almost anyone as "Bear."

Bryant answered the call of his alma mater, leaving seven years of a 10-year contract with Texas A & M unserved. Thus, not only was Auburn's territorial prowess in jeopardy, but Amos Alonzo Stagg's record of winning 314 games was in danger, though it would be some years coming. None of this, though, before Bryant had disarmed the area with an attack of humility. It is worth repeating what he said upon arrival:

"I'm just an ordinary coach who works hard. I can't accomplish miracles and don't expect to. I only hope to get Alabama competing on equal terms with other schools in the (Southeastern) Conference."

Another Bryant expression worth referring to now was this: "I had intended to retire in the near future, but now I'm willing to die with my boots on."

The Alabama legislature apparently had prepared the way for him, leaving it open for him to coach beyond any required retirement age.

However, from another part of the football nation another voice was being heard, sore with indignation. Ohio State had won the UPI prize as No. 1, the vote of a coaching panel, but this was not enough for Woody Hayes. "We are still the best in the nation," he insisted, particularly since the Buckeyes had won the Big Ten championship and beaten Oregon State in the Rose Bowl game. They had, along the route, made one critical error—they'd lost to Texas Christian on opening day, 18-14, and that was a damning oversight which the AP balloteers never forgave.

In neither case did the season run to "chalk." Both Auburn and Ohio State were out of sight in the preseason calculations, neither suspected of finishing among the Top Ten. Oklahoma hadn't lost a game since its seniors were in high school, and in the fine art of augury, it wasn't easy to see beyond the Sooners. They ran their streak to 47 victories in a row before the end came, and to show you how fickle the voters can be, all it took to dethrone them was a 7-0 loss to Notre Dame. Otherwise, it was a perfectly lovely season, all the way through the Orange Bowl game, in which the Sooners leveled Duke, 48-21.

That lone touchdown defeat cost Oklahoma its third national championship in a row and sent its ranking scuttling all the way down to fourth place, behind Auburn, Ohio State and Michigan State. The rest of the leading ten were Navy—ah, yes, service academy teams were still riding high and going to bowl games in those seasons—Iowa, Mississippi, Rice, Texas A&M and Notre Dame, rising from the ashes of a 2-8 season under the gentle hand of young Terry Brennan.

In the field of the individual, 1957 was somewhat a season of the curiosity. The leading offensive figures, as determined by the NCAA's official summation, were a sort of a collection of "Who's Zats?" As, I might point out here, history would in time verify.

The head man in total offense was a junior quarterback of lonely Washington State named Bob Newman. The San Francisco 49ers thought so highly of him they leaped on him early in the draft, though he was still another season away, having been a redshirt. Alas, the poor chap never played a down in the National League.

Frank Broyles took over the head coaching reins at Arkansas in '57.

Since becoming Alabama's head coach in 1957, Paul Bryant has enjoyed many victory rides.

The rushing leader, Leon Burton of Arizona State, put in one season with the un-Titanic New York Titans, and faded away. The passing leader, Ken Ford of Hardin-Simmons—not to be confused with his older brother "Model T"—never struck a lick among the pros either. Nor did Stu Vaughan of Utah, the catching leader.

While making it in the NFL is not necessarily the measure of immortality, neither of the leaders was recognized for his top-rank performance at the time by all-star appointment. Oddly enough, the consensus All-America team was without a quarterback, made up of John Crow of Texas A&M, who won the Heisman Award, Walt Kowalczyk of Michigan State, Bob Anderson of Army, and Clendon Thomas of Oklahoma, all runners.

Auburn's single representative was Jimmy (Red) Phillips, an exciting end who had a good career in the NFL. Among the rest of the All-America cast of the season were the quite recognizable names of Alex Karras and Lou Michaels, who need no further introduction here.

The most uncommon member of the All-America cast was a junior guard from Notre Dame named Al Ecuyer, uncommon because there was so little of him. In these times of squads that resemble herds and individuals built to stop speeding locomotives and topple tall buildings, Al Ecuyer would get a laugh instead of a letter. He weighed only 190 pounds, which he carried about on a frame of five feet ten. Proving it was no fluke, Ecuyer made it again the next season, but that was the end of the football line for him. Pros didn't go chasing 190-pound guards even then.

The 1950s were years of considerable rules dabbling. Platoon football had been ruled in and platoon football was ruled out. In 1957 the rules committee, chaired at the time by Fritz Crisler of Michigan, took another flying leap into the unknown. The members introduced the eight-point touchdown.

In other words, the two-point conversion became legal. You could still kick it for one, or you could go to offense, pass or run it for two. The new rule set off the wildest range of speculation you could imagine.

One group howled, "It'll kill the place-kicking game!" Another group cried out, "The hell it will, it'll bring back the dropkick!"

It did neither. All it did was increase cardiac cases among football coaches. No kind of lead seemed safe any more. It brought on the dynamite finish. Excitement down to the last tick of the clock. Many a dull game was restored to life by the menace of the two-point conversion.

Another revision of the rules was the first step back toward wide open substitution. It was kind of a toe-in-the-water

No other camera can match its features for the price.

"Any way you look at it, the Olympus OM-10FC is a breakthrough," says Cheryl Tiegs. "In sophistication. In simplicity. No other compact SLR has these breakthroughs."

The creativity breakthrough. The OM-10FC combines the ultimate: Off-the-Film™ automatic exposure and total Manual Control—features found only in far costlier cameras.

The Off-the-Film™ breakthrough.

Most SLR's lock in a pre-determined exposure before the shutter is released. OM-10FC automatically measures the proper amount of light required during actual exposure with total accuracy—and an LED tells you its setting!

The full control breakthrough. OM-10FC lets you set exposures manually from 1 second to 1/1000. Extra control, at no extra cost.

The foolproof flash breakthrough. With Olympus T-Series Flash, a brilliant viewfinder LED glows when flash is ready, then blinks to confirm correct flash exposure! Most SLR's leave you in the dark.

The technology breakthrough. Ingenious Olympus electronics control automatic meter shutoff, audio-visual self-timer and battery check, overexposure warning and other safeguards.

The versatility breakthrough. Choose from 300 matched Olympus System components including more than 36 lenses, rapid-fire auto winder, T-Series Flash units and more. The first and largest compact system.

step, just enough to see how the heat was. The new rule allowed any player to re-enter the game one time in each quarter. That opened the way for the emergence of Paul Dietzel's White team, Go team and the immortal Chinese Bandits at Louisiana State, with whose services he was able to win the national championship the following season. Eventually the flood gates were opened and free substitution flourished again.

And the two-point conversion has been accepted as an integral part of college football. Even the pros haven't been bold enough to attempt it.

This was the season of the beginning of the end of the old Pacific Coast Conference as the world knew it. California, Southern Cal, UCLA and Washington announced they were pulling out after the season of '58. The conference was dissolved, born again as the Pacific Eight and since has become the Pacific Ten, or Pac-10.

Bryant's switch from Texas A&M to his old school was not the only transfer of significance that year. A rather interesting chain of events was set off when Kansas decided not to rehire Chuck Mather, a sensation in Ohio high schools, a failure in corn country. The Jayhawks decided to replace Mather with Jack Mitchell, one of Bud Wilkinson's quarterbacks who had been helping Arkansas find happiness. Arkansas replaced Mitchell with Frank Broyles, who had put in just one season in the chair vacated by Don Faurot at Missouri. Missouri went to Arizona State for Dan Devine, and when Devine left, Arizona State laid the cornerstone for a dynasty of its own. The Sun Devil school promoted Frank Kush to head coach.

When Buck Shaw left the Air Force Academy for the Philadelphia Eagles, where he would win the NFL championship with Norm Van Brocklin quarterbacking in 1960, Ben Martin went west from Virginia and established his own regime that lasted a few seasons as well. The service academies had long since been sterilized by new rules and the urge to go pro, by the time he pulled out of Air Force in 1978.

Other coaches were removed by tragedy, one as mysterious as a movie plot. Jim Tatum had coached at North Carolina at the outbreak of World War II, gone into the Navy, established himself at Oklahoma on his discharge, moved to Maryland, and then, as had Bryant, answered the call of his alma mater and returned to North Carolina. He suffered a dreadful inaugural season, compounded by the presence of an ineligible player. The second season was an improvement, after which he went to Canada to take part in a coaching clinic and assist his old Tar Heel friend, Tops in total offense in '57 was Washington State QB, Bob Newman.

Peahead Walker, then coaching the Montreal Alouettes.

Tatum was struck by some sort of bug on the trip. Returning to Chapel Hill, he went into a hospital, came down with an infection and didn't come out alive. The 1957 season was his last.

On the West Coast, Henry (Red) Sanders suffered a heart attack one night in a hotel and died on the scene. Both Sanders and Tatum were sons of the South who had developed a prestige far beyond territorial boundaries and whose losses were a national shock.

As proven by time, the best team does not always win the bowl game. The games that followed the '57 season were no more than a startling testimonial to that fact. Ohio State, at the height of its "three yards and a cloud of dust" economy, did everything but lose to Oregon State in the Rose Bowl. The score was 10-7, but the outstanding player was a Beaver named Jack Crabtree, and so voted by the critics.

Mississippi didn't simply upset Texas, the Rebels slaughtered the Longhorns, 39-7, in the Sugar Bowl. Tennessee was brashly unsentimental in the Gator Bowl, and sent Bryant on his way from Texas A&M with another upset, 3-0. Rice sent its last Southwest Conference champions to the Cotton Bowl and saw them submarined by Navy, one of the last of the service academy powerhouses, featuring Tom Forrestal at quarterback. The score was 20-7.

And as previously reported, Oklahoma wiped out Duke.

Various and sundry revolutionary changes were taking place in the game. Television was making its bed with the colleges, under the strictest of supervision. The "live" gate had to be protected, a theory long since lost in the bedlam of the money game. The Ivy League was retiring to a game the academicians could be more comfortable with. The Pacific Coast was undergoing a severe wrench, though as time passed, it would eventually resume its old form. The rules changes would eventually return the platoon system and elevate to prominence the specialist as well as the "special" team.

Auburn has not since won another national championship, nor come close. What it did bring about in 1957, as well as its own prosperity, was a revival across the state at Tuscaloosa, much to the sorrow of all Tigers. Alabama has won or shared six national championships and 13 Southeastern Conference championships, and has lost to Auburn only four times since Bryant arrived, which is a story in itself.

THE HOME-FIELD ADVANTAGE

by Mary Schmitt,
Milwaukee JOURNAL

Picture this: It is an early fall evening on the island of Oahu in the Hawaiian Islands. The sun is setting, casting long beams of light over Aloha Stadium, where the University of Hawaii plays its home games in football. The stadium is surrounded by palm trees, and, off in the distance, is the Pacific Ocean. If you strain your eyes, you might be able to see the famed Diamond Head on one side, and you don't have to strain your eyes at all to see the mountains and the Moanalua Valley on the other side.

The entire scene is simply breathtaking. If you close your eyes for a moment, you can feel the lei being placed over your head, see the hula girls dancing, taste the scrumptious banquet at a luau.

And, when you open your eyes, what's the first thing that you think of: Why, football, naturally.

What? That wasn't the first thing that came to your mind? Exactly. Of course, it wasn't. But that may be the difference between a tourist and a football player when they visit Hawaii. A tourist is there for pleasure; a college football player is there to play football.

Or so it should be. And while an outsider may think that Hawaii lures opponents from the mainland, shows them the sights and sounds of the island and then beats the pants off them in the football game Saturday night, it's just not so.

Hawaii's road record was better than its home record last season. The Rainbows don't have the ridiculous home field advantage that one may think.

There are several reasons. First of all, they play more games at home. Secondly, according to assistant sports information director Steve Todd, some of the novelty has worn off.

"Coaches and players have become accustomed to this," Todd said, adding that cities like Las Vegas and San Francisco have plenty of distractions of their own. "They already know what to expect here, and the coaches also know how to take precautions to guard against the distractions. Some come in a day early to try and play before the jet lag hits and before the players discover the distractions. Some come in three or four days early to get used to the climate and distractions and get over the jet lag."

"Coaches make too much out of the home-field advantage," said a head coach. "There's not as much to playing at home as people think. Don't get me wrong. I love to play at home. We draw well. We've got good fans, good enthusiasm. But I think the home-field advantage is overrated."

The fans' spirit at a home game often gives their team a boost.

Other coaches take a different view. "Are you kidding," responded one head coach when asked if there is a home-field advantage. "Take a school like Michigan. Do you know how many teams can get the feeling of standing in the famed Michigan tunnel before 105,000 people?"

The National Collegiate Athletic Association and its individual conferences do not keep official statistics on the home-field advantage, but several agents of those conferences computed the following information:

In the Pacific-10 Conference the home teams were 37-21-1 last season, for a .636 winning percentage.

In the Big Ten the home teams were 39-21 last season, or .650.

And in the Southeastern Conference the home team was 38-19-2 or .663.

Included in those conferences are several teams with outstanding records at home. In the Pacific 10, for example, Arizona State was 7-0 last season. It is 66-13 since 1970 and 23-4 since joining the tough Pac-10 in 1978.

The Big Ten has Michigan, and, in the SEC, there is Alabama. Alabama has won 55 straight games in its on-campus stadium, Bryant Denny, and is 70-1 there since 1958. The lone defeat was a 10-6 loss to Florida, Oct. 12, 1963. The Crimson Tide has another stadium that is considered a home field, Legion Field in Birmingham, where the Tide has been known to lose a few, although very few, games.

"I think the home-field advantage is more important in some places than others," said a legendary coach. "I think it's not really as important here as it is at places like LSU, Georgia or Tennessee."

"Naturally, anyone playing at home has a slight advantage as far as the playing field goes, because they've been on it so many times. Another big advantage is the home crowd. In some places we play, the fans are more difficult than the teams. Some people say that about us, but I think it's tough at Texas A&M, Texas, Notre Dame, places like that."

Fans of the Fighting Irish will no doubt agree. Overall, the Fighting Irish are 190-50-4 in Notre Dame Stadium, a .779 winning percentage. In the 52 years since the stadium was built, the Irish have gone undefeated at home 21 times.

Said one fan, "Here at Notre Dame, we have what I think is the greatest student body in the country. That kind of cheering and vocal support can help charge players, as well as coaches, up. Everybody gets the chills when they hear our band playing the victory march and can see the Golden Dome in the distance. Notre Dame's tradition and mystique can be overwhelming, especially to an opponent who has never been here before. The ghosts of the Gipper and Rockne might bother them just a bit."

"Michigan, Purdue, Michigan State,

Southern Cal and Navy have been here before, and being at Notre Dame doesn't bother them as much as it might bother a new opponent. In fact, that might help charge them up. They want to win on your home turf to prove it can be done."

Another advantage for a team playing at home is that the players are on familiar turf. They can follow their regular routine. There are no travel plans breaking up their class and practice schedule.

"I don't think games are won or lost on the home-field advantage, though. No matter where you play, the best team will win."

Another coach agreed. "If you're a good football team, you should be able to play anywhere."

"But playing at home has its plusses. It's a big thing when you sell out and a lot of teams do. The crowd environment is a big factor when there are 75,000 or 78,000 fans. It's something."

"It's also your whole environment on Friday. There are a lot of factors, like your own dressing room, being in your own bed, having your family around and your friends—your own routine."

Indeed, there are a lot of factors involved, and probably just as many opinions on the home-field advantage. Does it give the home team an advantage? Maybe. How much? Who knows? Only one thing is for sure. It's not important at all if you don't have it.

The legend of The Pendleton Shirt.

It all began in the Pacific Northwest. At the turn of the century, a pioneer family began weaving blankets, robes and shawls of exceptional quality in Pendleton, Oregon. Many designs were inspired by the motifs of the nearby Nez Perce Indian Nation.

It was an ideal place for such a beginning. Rich grasslands nurtured bands of sheep that grew wool of the highest quality. Soft, pure water was abundant for scouring and dyeing. And the family brought to the task a heritage of weaving which began generations before in England.

Through the years, Pendleton blankets and robes came to be considered a standard of value among settlers and Indians throughout the West.

And so the legend of excellence began.

The family then applied its skills to the creation of 100% virgin wool clothing fabrics. Fine, beautiful fabrics which were then tailored into shirts that loggers, ranchers and sportsmen of the region could wear a lifetime.

Each shirt was "warranted to be a Pendleton," to assure the buyer that the company stood behind its products, in quality and workmanship.

And the legend grew.

Today, four generations later, the family is still making shirts warranted to be Pendletons, to the same standards our forefathers set those many years ago.

We continue to use only pure, virgin wools, selected and graded by hand each shearing season.

We design the patterns, dye the wool, spin the yarn, weave the fabrics.

And then, in over 60 careful steps, these pure virgin wool fabrics are cut and sewn into Pendleton Shirts.

It is this commitment to quality and value in 100% virgin wool, this attention to detail every step, every stitch of the way, that makes a Pendleton Shirt different from every shirt in the world.

It is the commitment we have always made to a Pendleton Shirt. And always will.

The legend deserves no less.

TAILGATE PICNICKING

Tailgate parties are fun in any form.

If you're the type that prefers cooking your pre-game delectables in the parking lot, note this newly developed recipe for Crunchy Calico Franks. It's a triple-threat idea combining meat, vegetables and cheese.

Or, if you'd rather make your food at home and tote it to the game, Citrus Glazed Chicken is a delicious way to start another golden autumn afternoon.

Both new recipes were especially developed for tailgaters by The R. T. French Company Kitchens in Rochester, N. Y.

Crunchy Calico Franks turns a hot dog into a complete meal with a zippy dressing that marries shredded Cheddar cheese and chopped vegetables into an intriguing mustard-mayonnaise blend. It's colorful, different, and delicious. And it's good on burgers, too.

Serve the franks with a marinated bean salad, carrot and green pepper slices, coffee, fresh apples, and chocolate chip cookies.

Citrus Glazed Chicken features a tangy glaze that's made with simplest of ingredients . . . orange juice concentrate, lemon juice, brown sugar, and Worcestershire sauce. Baste with the sauce, bake, chill, then pack in an insulated bag.

Complete your tailgate meal with crisp vegetable relishes, sliced pound cake, and a thermos of coffee.

CALICO CRUNCHY FRANKS

- 1/2 cup chopped celery*
- 1/2 cup chopped green pepper*
- 1/2 cup chopped radishes*
- 1 cup shredded Cheddar cheese*
- 1/4 cup mayonnaise*
- 1 tablespoon prepared yellow mustard*
- 8 to 10 frankfurters*
- 8 to 10 frankfurter rolls*

Combine chopped vegetables, cheese, mayonnaise, and mustard. Grill, broil, or pan fry frankfurters. Toast rolls. Serve hot dogs in rolls topped with two generous spoonfuls of the vegetable-cheese mixture. Makes 2 cups relish, enough for 8 to 10 frankfurters.

CITRUS GLAZED CHICKEN

- 3 tablespoons butter or margarine*
- 1/4 cup undiluted orange juice concentrate*
- 1/4 cup water*
- 1/4 cup lemon juice*
- 2 tablespoons brown sugar*
- 2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce*
- 4 to 6 pieces chicken*

Melt butter; stir in orange juice concentrate, water, lemon juice, brown sugar, and Worcestershire sauce. Arrange chicken on rack in shallow pan. Brush with orange mixture. Bake at 400° for 40 to 60 minutes, turning occasionally and brushing with orange mixture. Chill. 4 to 6 servings.

Top Return Specialists in '82

by Arnie Burdick, Syracuse
HERALD-JOURNAL

Irving Fryar is Nebraska's most exciting kick returner since Heisman Trophy winner Johnny Rodgers.

One of the more shopworn coaching cliches in football is that "the offense sells the tickets, but you win with defense and the kicking game."

No truer proverb has ever been offered since Rutgers and Princeton started all of this "Fall Madness" back in November of '69. And for the youngsters in the audience, that's eighteen-sixty-nine!

But even today, when the kicking game is mentioned, gridiron fans think only of the specialist who comes trotting onto the field to punt the ball out of sight, or the petite sidewinder, dwarfed by his massive teammates, who opens the festivities by hopefully kicking off into the rival's end zone.

However, the "kicking game" is much more than just the kicker. It's the deep, accurate snap on a punt, PAT or field goal try. . . . It's protection . . . coverage . . . and the return.

Yes, The Return!

Probably, no other play in football has turned games upside down more than the return . . . Both punt and kickoff returns.

Nothing is more explosive and exciting . . . nor more demoralizing . . . than the long return that turns a beauty of a boot into a kick in the pants. And if the fleet blur of a kick-catcher breaks it all the way for a touchdown, it's even more sensational and uplifting. . . . Or deflating, if you reside in the other camp.

They always refer to the kickers as "specialists," but it takes an unusual talent to catch kicks and return them consistently for meaningful distance that can enable your mates to enjoy good field position.

A returner must have sure hands . . . daring and nerve . . . plus rapid, quick feet, with a variety of moves that can leave a tackler clutching only armfuls of air.

Fortunately, college football will shower this autumn's gridirons with a cascade of top-flight returners who can turn a game around quicker than most fans can spring to their feet and root their hero into the end zone.

Who's the top threat? Good question, for there's hardly a major team that doesn't have a slippery piece of lightning poised to grab the ball and return it back down the kicker's throat.

Perhaps, the most dangerous—because he's been doing it consistently for the past three seasons—is Michigan's spectacular dervish—Anthony Carter. The two-time All-America has piled up better than a mile of returns during his illustrious career as he's helped the Blue-Go!

Carter's not very robust — 161 pounds, on a 5-11 frame—but the senior from Florida's Riviera Beach has been dynamite every time he touches the ball, either as a pass or kick-catcher. And he showed in his very first college game that he was "Public Enemy No. 1" by returning a Northwestern punt 78 yards for a TD.

You might expect his veteran head coach, Bo Schembechler, to pull out all the stops for his prodigy. "Anthony Carter is, without question," beams Bo, "the most exciting player in college football. He is simply spectacular. He has no peer at his position or as a big play specialist. He is the most dynamic and explosive performer in college football."

But he's just one of dozens of spectacular returners who will thrill collegiate football gatherings this fall by quickly changing the game's momentum.

"We look at the punt and kickoff returner as two different athletes," says Coach Dick MacPherson of Syracuse, who also logged a half-dozen years of coaching time in the NFL. "We love to have a kick-returner who has the potential to make the other people be concerned that he can go all the way."

"The kickoff returner should have super speed so that he can pick up some yardage before the collision takes place. Unlike the punt returner, he can even drop the ball on the catch, which might upset the timing of the coverage. By contrast, the kid catching punts must have sure hands, and be able to make the one good lateral move. He's got to be able to avoid the first wave, get to the lane and pick up his blocking. If you have the one athlete who can do both, so much the better. But each returner must have the speed either to go all the way, or to get you good field position. And it doesn't hurt if he causes the opponent to worry."

Mac's two Orange returners are separate peas in the pod. Junior Ed Koban, who also plays a defensive corner, has been catching punts sure-handedly for two years and ranked 11th in the nation last fall, whereas Big East sprint king Mike Morris is a soph who'll see both kickoff return and wide receiver duty. He's the kid brother of Joe Morris, who broke all the career rushing marks during his just-concluded Syracuse career.

But there's a raft of seasoned returners ready to be sprung loose, and there's a whole slew of other rapid neophytes who haven't even had a chance to break up a game.

One kickoff returner who can rip is Indiana's flanker-sprinter, Duane Gunn. The junior raced back 11 kickoffs for 300 yards last fall, including a 97-yard scoring jaunt vs. Syracuse that put the Phil Smith, San Diego State's speedster, ranked in the top ten in kickoff returns last fall.

Hoosiers ahead. Yet IU fans call Duane the "fastest Gunn in Hoosierland since famed Billy Hillenbrand" returned kicks.

Top kickoff man in the nation last fall was Louisville's Frank Minnifield, who returns for his senior season. The stumpy (5-9), 181-pounder averaged 30.4 yards per return, ripping 11 back for 334 and one TD, an 89-yarder against Tennessee State.

Penn State's Curt Warner was used sparingly returning kickoffs last fall due to a hamstring pull, but his first two seasons, he brought them back better than 800 yards, including at least three all the way. Once Warner shifts into high in the open field, watch out.

South Carolina gained more than 11 yards a return when Troy Thomas fielded punts.

LSU's Eric Martin, Missouri's James Caver, Oregon's Steve Brown, Utah's Carl Monroe and San Diego's Phil Smith were all in the NCAA Top Ten kickoff return listings last fall.

Brown, who also stars at one of the Ducks' corners, has wheeled back kicks 1,196 yards, including 694 last autumn. One was a 93-yarder for a TD vs. Washington State. Smith came to San Diego State as a walk-on quarterback candidate, but was quickly converted to a return-receiver due to his 4.4 speed. He was eighth in the nation, with a 25.1 average on 22 kickoffs last fall. A junior college transfer, Monroe was 7th nationally.

IF GEESE WERE INVENTED TODAY, THEY'D BE WEARING THINSULATE® THERMAL INSULATION.

FOR CENTURIES, GEESE HAVE KEPT WARM THE SAME OLD WAY.

Feathers, feathers and more feathers. Fine, in their time. But now man has created something better. Thinsulate Thermal Insulation from 3M. A goose would be silly not to give it a try.

WE USE FIBERS, NOT FEATHERS.

Our special microfibers trap more air than most other insulations do. And that's the key to our amazing warmth. You see, the more air an insulator traps the better it works. True. And that means a half inch of Thinsulate Insulation is actually 1.8 times warmer than a half inch of down. Nearly twice as warm. In Thinsulate Insulation, a goose might not mind staying north all winter.

IT'S EASIER TO FLAP YOUR WINGS IN THINSULATE INSULATION.

Because it takes less of our insulation to keep you warm, you get a sleek, lean, racy look. Not bulky. In Thinsulate Insulation, you can lead an active outdoor life. Freedom of movement from wingtip to wingtip.

OUR INSULATION ISN'T AFRAID TO GO NEAR THE WATER.

Should you happen to get it wet, don't worry. Unlike down, Thinsulate Insulation retains almost all of its insulating value under damp conditions. And it can even be machine washed or dry cleaned, depending on the garment's care instructions.

WHAT'S GOOD FOR THE GOOSE IS JUST AS GOOD FOR YOU.

The U.S. Navy Divers, the 1981 British Winter Expedition on Everest, and hard-working ski patrollers and instructors around the world use Thinsulate Insulation. Because it works for them. In fact, they've been shouting its praises, from the highest mountain to the deepest sea. You will, too. When you're out in your element. Just look for the Thinsulate Insulation hang tag on an assortment of clothing and accessories designed to keep you warmer.

Oregon might double-team its foes, for Dwight Robertson is healthy again. He had blazing luck his first two seasons, being eighth nationally in '79. Washington's Anthony Allen, No. 2 in school history, can wheel back in high style both punts and kickoffs. A baseball star, too, Illinois State's Mike Prior likes to "dive through the air when he runs out of ground." Mike gets the crowd on its feet when he gets off of his.

Wichita State's sprinter Glen Stewart averaged 22.7 with kickoffs. He clocks a 4.62 in the 40. Ball State's record-wrecker, senior Stevie Nelson, owns the Mid-American Conference mark of 100 yards for a KO return. He led the nation his frosh year with a 31.4 average. Another superior track performer (he was NCAA Long Jump Champion) is Arizona's swift soph Vance Johnson. His kick returns were a saviour for the Wildcats, constantly giving them good field position. Long Beach State's Lenny Montgomery, brother of the Eagles' Wilbert Montgomery, returned kickoffs 101 yards in his first game vs. Louisville.

Iowa's Norm Granger, who also plays fullback, enjoyed a 99-yard TD return vs. Indiana and three for 107 yards vs. Iowa State. Texas Tech's Leonard Harris is someone to keep your eye on. He's very quick and only 150 pounds. New Mexico State's Bobby Humphrey returned a kickoff for 100 yards and a TD both his soph and junior seasons. He led the Missouri Valley Conference in KO returns last fall. Top kickoff returner in the Eastern College Conference last year was Dartmouth's Pete Lavery. He averaged 25.3 yards, and plays hockey and baseball, too.

Back for more punt-catching duty is Mississippi State's Glen Young, first in the nation last fall, with a 16.2 average. Glen not only has sprinter's speed, but he's got size, too (6-3, 205). He returned 19 punts last fall for 307 yards, but did even better the year before on kickoffs—19 for 525 and a 100-yarder vs. LSU. He's averaged 12.5 yards each time he's touched the ball. Tennessee's Willie Gault, a member of the 1980 U. S. Olympic team, can really fly. He was sixth last fall catching punts.

Other fleet burners are West Virginia's Willie Drewrey, Army's Larry Pruitt, Louisville's Keith Humphries, TCU's John Thomas, Nebraska's Irving Fryar, NC State's Louis Meadows, Wyoming's Darnell Clash and North Carolina's Greg Poole.

Drewrey, just a soph now, handles both punts and kickoffs for the Mountaineers. Meadows, who plays a corner on defense and who's also a superb baseball player, broke his hand last fall, but can really wheel back a punt. Clash has tremendously quick feet and great balance, and also starts at the corner. He was the top returner in the WAC last fall. Poole led the ACC in punt returns and ranked eighth nationally. He has a chance to break the immortal Choo-Choo Justice's Tar Heel record for returns. Fryar's 82-yard TD punt return triggered Nebraska off to a second half spurt that demolished Florida State. He's probably the Huskers' most dangerous returner since Johnny Rodgers a decade back. Humphries is only 5-7, 153 pounds, but he ranked third as a frosh last year. He returns kickoffs, too.

Baylor's Gerald McNeil returned 41 punts his frosh year for 395 yards. He's only 139 pounds and is probably the smallest youngster playing major college ball. He's a fine split end, too. A Missouri walk-on, James Caver is a fine receiver and kickoff returner, the only player to rank in the NCAA Top 20 in both kickoff and punt returns. Mississippi's Michael Harmon has led Ole Miss in punt returns for three straight years, and he races back kickoffs, too. His brother Clarence is a running back for the Washington Redskins. Mike Kirby returned 19 punts for the Air Force for a 10.8 average, but he also led the team in receiving with 35 catches. Maryland's new coach Bobby Ross thinks he's got a pair of dangerous returners in Willie Joyner and Mike Lewis, while Oregon's Eugene "Choo Choo" Young has been "Mr. Consistency" with a career average of 10.1 yards per return.

Tulsa has two threats—senior Ken Lacy and soph Nate Harris. Both can explode with kickoffs in an open field. Meanwhile, Brent Dennis can raise trouble for Hurricane foes with his willowy punt returns. Pitt's Tom Flynn and Tim Lewis mean business returning kicks, too, with Flynn's 83-yard TD punt return vs. Florida State being a bellringer. Washington's Ray Horton can fly with punts and showed his speed in the Rose Bowl last January. South Carolina's Troy Thomas is a bundle of dynamite, too. He averaged 11.3 yards with punts, and led the defensive backs in tackles, too.

Notre Dame's Dave Duerson has a career punt return mark of 69 for 624. He's one of three Irish captains. East Carolina's Jimmy Walden is about as tough to collar as a lightning bug. He gives the pirates a hand returning both punts and kickoffs. Brian Brennan, Boston College junior, has been doing an exceptional job with punt returns as well as being a star flanker. Northwestern's Ricky Edwards had 30 KO returns for 611 yards, while Wake Forest's Tommy Gregg did a fine job with punts. Fresno State's Henry Ellard has averaged better than 20 yards with kickoff returns for three seasons, while Yale's Paul Andrie led the Elis returning both punts and kickoffs.

Though Eric Martin will be only a sophomore, LSU fans are already raving about him. He tied the SEC record with a 100-yard kickoff return against Kentucky. He has good size, too—6-3, 193. And Tulane is ecstatic about Reggie Reginelli, who handles all the punt returns as well as plays fullback. Virginia's pushing Pat Chester, a streak in an open field, while TCU has an exceptional punt returner in John Thomas, who led the SWC and was third in the nation.

Wherever fans turn this fall, they'll spot a bundle of highly-charged nerves and excitement poised to bring a kick back and turn a game upside down. Kick returns are still one of college football's most exciting plays, and there's no forewarning when lightning is about to strike.

Champion

After winning the IMSA GTU Manufacturers' Championship in 1980, the Mazda RX-7 did it again in 1981. We think this is a notable achievement, especially when you consider that the RX-7 didn't compete in IMSA racing until 1979, when it was merely the runner-up.

It was also a winning year for RX-7 drivers Lee Mueller and Walt Bohren, who finished at the top of the GTU pointstandings.

Meanwhile, the street version of the RX-7 continues to win acclaim as today's most incredible sports car value.

For example, in August 1981, Road & Track magazine selected the RX-7 as one of the 10 Best Cars For the Eighties. Here's part of what they had to say:

"In the class for Closed Sports Car, the Mazda RX-7 won on a unanimous vote... Its performance is excellent with smooth acceleration from the rotary engine, its handling and braking are hard to fault, it's comfortable on long trips... and the price is surprisingly low."

Look for the RX-7 race car during the 1982 IMSA season. And look for the 1982 RX-7 sports car now at your nearest Mazda dealer. You'll find that the Mazda RX-7 is a winner—any way you look at it.

THE OFFENSIVE LINE

Would There Be Great Running Backs Without It?

by Bill Free, Baltimore MORNING SUN

In a society that loves to make heroes out of football players, the offensive lineman is obviously lost. There is no athlete in the world of sports who is more obscure than an offensive lineman. He is truly the forgotten man, shoved far into the background of the more glamorous All-America running backs and quarterbacks.

Many fans wouldn't know an offensive lineman on even a championship team if they tripped over him. He never dashes 80 yards for the winning touchdown in the final seconds, never marches his team down the field for a touchdown, never dives across the turf to gather in a pass, never crashes through the line to spill a quarterback for a 15-yard loss, or kicks the ball through the uprights as time runs out to snatch victory from imminent defeat.

The offensive lineman has to learn to live with the fact that only his coaches and teammates really appreciate what kind of job he's doing. But that can sometimes become a lonely life. There was one offensive lineman from a southern school who had spent four years dressing at a locker near the star running back on the team, and couldn't help speaking up on his last day with the team. He had sat all alone for four years listening to the running back get asked every question imaginable, and couldn't help wondering why he was never asked a single question. So he popped up and began to spell his name, just to make sure that somebody knew who he was before he walked out the door after opening many holes for the running back who had gained a lot of national recognition.

The lineman held no malice toward the star runner because he had heard his teammates attempt several times throughout their careers to shift the spotlight to the line. But nobody listened. They went right ahead and wrote about the great runs the back had to lead his team to victory.

But would those runs have been possible without the holes cleared by the lineman and his mates across the interior line?

This is where the fun begins. There is certainly no runner, no matter how great he is, who can do it all alone. But there are some college backs who can become great runners behind average offensive lines.

"I've seen a few running backs who can dominate a defense on sheer strength," said a highly successful Pac-10 coach who makes a habit of sending polished offensive linemen out of his program. "But I think a successful running game goes beyond a single runner or an offensive line. I think it's more the total philosophy a coach has for running the ball. It's a condition of the game that the players become accustomed to an environment for the run."

The coach believes that a great runner will find one or two big gainers a game regardless of what kind of blocking he receives, but doesn't see the great runner having a consistent performance without at least an average line in front of him.

"When you're starting a team from scratch, you start with the offensive line," he said. "At our school, we like to think of the offensive line as an elite group. It sets its own standards for understanding success... instead of hearing from somebody else all the time how good or bad it played."

The offensive lineman can only live or die on one thing at all levels of the college game—consistency. If he can accomplish that, he's done his job and doesn't have to hope that someone will recognize his work in the trenches.

"You don't get recognition," said a

Midwest coach. "You just continue to work in anonymity. It's hard for a coach to substantiate just how well an offensive lineman is playing when he talks to people."

Destined to live in obscurity, offensive linemen often find other interests outside of football to feed their need for recognition. The men who clear the way for the runner to roll up the yards usually are the most intelligent players on the team. They have to learn an intricate series of blocking schemes that demand a lot of innate common sense and athletic ability.

"The offensive lineman is asked to be an active, aggressive person, and to be passive at the same time," said a midwestern coach. "He has to be aggressive when it comes time to blow away a defensive lineman but passive when it's time to fit into the overall team concept."

Most running backs develop a sense of compassion for their blockers, and promise them rewards for helping them gain so many yards or score a certain number of touchdowns. It's the runner's way of saying thanks for springing him into the spotlight, which he knows will never shine on the 6-4 250-pound giants in front of him.

It's so much easier to see what the great running back is doing," said a Southwest coach. "Once the back clears the line of scrimmage, he's on his own... his talents are there for everybody to admire while the lineman is picking himself off the ground and preparing to punish his body again."

The lineman does have one chance to be noticed, but it's not the kind of recognition he seeks. If he is guilty of holding on a play that nullifies a big gainer from the fleet-footed running back, he gets signaled out pretty quick as the guy who made the "bonehead" play to ruin it all.

And, unlike the running back who fumbles or the quarterback who throws an interception, the lineman has no way of making the fans forgive him. He can't come back on the next play and show the people in the stands what a great block he's just made. Only the people who dissect the films closely can see clearly what the lineman has contributed.

For most linemen, that is enough satisfaction to keep them working harder and harder each day to learn the finer points of a position that isn't considered one of the "skilled" positions on a team.

When a coach talks of those positions, he is talking about the players who have a chance to win a Heisman Trophy some day. Running backs and quarterbacks head the list, with the runners the more frequent winners of college football's ultimate award.

It's easy to see why this running back will pick up big yardage—his blockers have cleared a wide path for him.

"There are some running backs who can do a lot of it on their own," said a southern coach at a major football school. "These are the guys who have the great vision, the instincts, and the lightning quick step to make it through even the smallest holes. They can feel the holes as they're opening."

But very few coaches are fortunate enough to come up with that kind of runner. They only come along once in a while, leaving most coaches with the job of putting together a front line that can tear gaping holes in the defense—holes that are big enough for the average runner to gain considerable yards.

"With the closed-down defenses these days," said the coach from the Midwest, "it's really hard for a good runner to gain much without an exceptional offensive line."

Which brings us back to the amazing disregard for the offensive lineman in football. You'd figure that some way, somehow there would be a better method of giving linemen more credit. You know, just a few little notes that would say something about the man up front.

Anything to prevent a guy from playing four years at a school without attracting a ripple of attention. But maybe the gentle giants who usually apply their trade up front would be embarrassed with a lot of attention.

After all, they certainly couldn't have expected any headlines the day they agreed to be offensive linemen. It just isn't a part of the game of football and probably never will be.

College Football Field Facts

Try to memorize the following facts about the college football field, then impress your friends at the next game with your great technical knowledge!

—Regulation measurements for the field are: 360 feet long from goal post to goal post; 300 feet long for the actual playing field; 160 feet wide.

—The specifications for the goal posts are: The uprights must extend at least 20 feet above the ground with a connecting white crossbar, the top of which is 10 feet above the ground. Above the crossbar the uprights must be painted white and be 23'-4" apart inside to inside and not more than 24 feet apart outside to outside.

—All field dimension lines must be four inches in width and marked with a white, nontoxic material.

—Yard lines may be marked inside or outside the sideline. All inside yard lines must be four inches from the sideline.

—The inbounds lines are marked at 53'-4" from each sideline.

—On each side of the field a team area must be marked off behind the limit line (which is either 12 feet or six feet, depending on the stadium, from the sidelines and end lines) and between the 30-yard lines.

—Commercial advertising is prohibited within the playing area.

For once, the Wildcats are loaded with sheer numbers. Depth abounds as 26 starters return at 22 positions. Among them is the coach's son, three-year quarterback starter Darrell Ray Dickey.

K-State's premier returning offensive star is one of the seven 1981 redshirts — 6-2, 260-pound, three-year guard starter Amos Donaldson. He has 4.85 speed in the 40 and bench presses more than 400 pounds.

Defensively, the Wildcats return such individual standouts as tackle Reggie Singletary, safety Gary Morrill, strong safety Jim Bob Morris and linebacker Will Cokeley.

Singletary was the Big Eight's Defensive Newcomer of the Year after making 109 tackles. Morrill was second-team all-conference with 88 tackles and four interceptions.

Morris and Cokeley were both '81 redshirts after earning second-team all-league status in 1980.

MISSOURI

Warren Powers' fifth Tiger team faces its biggest question marks on defense, where five standouts were graduated.

Offensively, Powers says, Mizzou is "much better off than a year ago." Senior tight end Andy Gibler and senior flanker James Caver are two reasons for his optimism.

Gibler, 6-4 and 230, caught more passes than any Big Eight tight end—27 for 223 yards. He's beginning his fourth year as a starter.

Caver, 5-10 and 170, is a walk-on who became the league's No. 2 receiver last season, catching 33 passes for 509 yards. He was the only player in the nation to be ranked in the top 20 in both NCAA punt returns and kickoff returns.

THE COMPUTER AGE IN COLLEGE FOOTBALL

by Richard Hoffer,
Los Angeles TIMES

College football, at first glance, is not what you'd call high-tech sport, its basic premise borrowing more from the stone age than the space age. It's extremely primitive in the evolution of games, all push and pull, a kind of neanderthal development in man's recreation. It's more muscle than math, more physiques than physics, more strength than strategy.

But at second glance, college football turns out to be among the more sophisticated of our sports. If sometimes those offensive lines seem to be careening downfield with the approximate abandon of a runaway bulldozer, consider that each unit has been deployed with all the science of a moon shot, each player programmed with the precision required of particle physics. There are no random events in football anymore.

Right now, the Army National Guard is looking for men and women who want to be officers.

It's a tough, challenging job. One of the most important jobs in America. And you'll find the rewards match the challenge.

For instance, in the Army Guard, you'll gain valuable management and leadership skills you may use in your civilian career. You'll earn an excellent part-time income and be entitled to free air travel, PX privileges, life insurance, a fully paid retirement plan, and lots more.

You'll be serving close to home, helping people in your community and state when natural disasters or other emergencies arise. And, after your initial training, it takes just two days a month and two weeks annual training each year to serve, so you'll have plenty of time for your family, friends, school or job.

If you have previous experience as an Army officer, you can probably join the Army Guard as an officer. If not, and you qualify, you can get a commission through the Officer Candidate Programs, or a direct commission based on your unique civilian job experience.

To get the total picture on opportunities for officers in the Army National Guard, contact your local Army Guard recruiter, or call toll-free 800-638-7600.*

This is the computer age, for football as well as most other pursuits, each stadium a sort of Silicon Valley nowadays with all its software and hardware. Believe it or not, the computer is now as much a part of the college game as cleats and shoulder pads. No coach worth his whistle is without a rolled up printout. The blackboard, with all those chalked-in Xs and Os, has been replaced by a computer terminal, its binary bits organizing themselves into a game plan.

It almost figures that college football coaches would be among the first to apply whatever science was available to the game. It's become such a competitive sport, with various bodies legislating fairness into the game, that any edge at all is worth the effort. There is, of course, the given of time—each coach having just so much of it. Then there's the matter of talent, again, each coach having just so much of it. The "30-95" recruiting rule, which means that teams can no longer hoard talent and create dynasties, has had the same equalizing effect as the seven-day week.

"So now," says one West Coast coach, "the key is what kind of scouting you do. And how much of it you can do in so limited a time. Preparation is the important thing these days."

The computer is what coaches are using in this preparation, especially in the scouting of opponents. Here's how it works:

Coaches take as many as five game films of their upcoming opponent and sit down in darkened rooms to chart each play, both offense and defense. The coaches don't just want to know what plays the opponent runs but to what effect they run them. Furthermore, the coaches want to know when these plays are called—what down, what distance. And from where—from what hash-mark, from what yard line. What's the formation? You name it, the coaches chart every factor but the weather.

And they'd chart that if they could tell what it was like from the grainy game films.

All these variables are punched into a computer terminal, usually by a graduate assistant with a flair for math that goes beyond the tables of weights and measures. What emerges, in time for the week's first practices, is a clear picture of the opponent's tendencies. In other words, the coach can now predict the opponent's up-coming play by simply identifying such factors as formation, down and distance and field position.

Well, he can in theory. However, knowing that an opponent runs "28-sweep" 66% of the time on second-and-short from an I-formation between the 30-yard lines is not the same as knowing for sure what's going to happen. If you make a mistake just one-third of the time, all the computer programs in the world aren't going to help you.

While most coaches agree the computer has become indispensable—"The mind can't collect and organize information the way a computer does," says one coach—they also agree that it has not made the coach dispensable.

"The computer only gives back what you put into it," says one coach. "You can get misled. Some plays look great on the computer printout but, well, statistics can lie there, too."

"It's really just a time-saving device," says a West Coast coach. "The computer can digest amounts of material that humans could never handle and in much less time. But, you can make a mistake by relying on it too much. You see something out there that leads you to believe a certain play is coming, well, you could be in trouble committing your defense. Game plans are still a lot of guesswork—computers just cut down on a little of it."

Yet another coach has his reservations. He uses computers, but mainly to relieve his assistants from the duty of stat keeping. "But the worst thing about computers is that they give you too much," he says. "There it is, just belching out stats. How do you get to the pertinent stuff? The real sophistication in the use of computers is keeping it simple. We use the computer to kick out only the most dramatic tendencies. If you allow for every formation, every down and distance . . . my gosh, you'll never get ready."

The defense probably relies on the computer in the making of its game plan more than the offense. The defense, after all, has more cues to react to. The offense may recognize some patterns in secondary coverage, blitzing and so on, but mostly the offense is simply going to do whatever it's going to do.

But one important application of computer use, particularly for the offense, is self-scouting. Just as the defense charts an opposing offense's tendencies, the offense will chart its own. "You can really surprise yourself," a coach says. "You find that you can get pretty predictable and without realizing it. That's one of the benefits of a computer printout. It's there in black and white—you're passing on third-and-long 90 percent of the time."

But if a team effectively self-scouts and programs its own characteristic tendencies out of its game, does that mean the opponent's use of the computer to scout those same tendencies is futile? Yes and no.

"You might say yes," says a coach, "because whatever tendencies you note in your opponent may have been corrected by the time you play them. If we can observe patterns with our computer, they probably can observe them with theirs. On the other hand, what you're doing is forcing them to change to something they might not be comfortable doing."

What happens is that a team will play according to the printout until it's proven wrong. Sometimes that never happens; most teams won't change dramatically no matter how obvious their patterns are (Will Stanford, for example, stop passing? USC stop sweeping?). But what about when it's proven wrong? Wouldn't it be nice if an assistant could sit in the press box and chart the opponent's tendencies through the first quarter and come up with a chart of tendencies by the second quarter?

Yes, it would be nice. One coach gets all mouth-watery at the prospect. "That certainly sounds exciting," he says. The coach could operate a terminal right from the sidelines, updating his opponent's tendencies and increasing the predictive values of each play. But it won't be allowed.

What is the next frontier, then? One coach remembers that, even before the advent of all this technology, coaches were using a primitive kind of computer to do the same thing. Instead of punching the material into a keyboard they quite literally punched it onto the edges of a square cardboard card with a school teacher's ring punch. When all the characteristics were punched in the coach would shoot an ice pick through the holes and shake the batch of cards. The appropriate cards would fall out. "They say necessity is the mother of invention," the coach says. "Really, it's desperation that's the mother of invention. You can count on some additional applications."

One application has already occurred to one coach. "What if you had one of these video games, like Pac-Man or something, programmed for a football game," he says. "You could have your quarterbacks at some kind of control and they'd have to identify, say, a certain coverage on the screen and react to it. For example, he sees the secondary flash up in one formation and he has to move to a certain area."

When that day comes, it may be that scholarships will be awarded in quarters.

Until then, coaches will muddle along with their own computer keyboards, each one trying to outsmart the other with his printout. "Of course," says a coach, "you can program all the information you want, but what you're left with on Saturday is some kids trying to do the job. You might think you know what's going to happen—and you might be right—but those kids still have to execute."

Meaning, one must presume, football will never become another of those computer games.

Charmglow grills up a great season

The Charmglow Bantam Gas Grill is perfect for tailgate parties. No wonder. It's so light, it goes anywhere as easily as a picnic basket. Great for fishing and camping, too.

It gives great outdoor flavor to any food with the greatest convenience. Instant starts. No warm-up wait. No charcoal mess. Plus, its large cooking surface cooks up a tasty party for a huddle of sports fans. And to ensure a winning party, there's a free Charmglow Tailgate Recipe Booklet included in each Bantam.

So, this season and every season, go for the taste of victory. Go with the #1 name in gas grills. Charmglow.

Big Eight Football Preview

Defensively, the Tigers return standouts Kevin Potter at strong safety, Demetrious Johnson at left cornerback and Randy Jostes at tackle.

Potter was a consensus all-conference selection, leading the Mizzou secondary with 70 tackles. Johnson, a second team all conference choice, was the star of Mizzou's 19-14 win over Oklahoma. In that game, he recovered a fumble, intercepted a pass and overtook OU quarterback Darrell Shepard from behind for a touchdown-saving tackle.

Jostes, a two-year starter, had 57 tackles.

NEBRASKA

If any team has more proven depth at tailback than Tom Osborne's Cornhuskers, then that team doesn't play on Saturday afternoons during the fall.

In Roger Craig and Mike Rozier, Nebraska claims two honors candidates at 1-back. Craig, 6-2 and 216, led the Huskers in rushing with 1,060 yards. His best game was a 234-yard performance against Florida State.

Rozier rushed for 946 yards and a 6.2-yard average for the season. His blinding speed is reflected in a 93-yard kickoff return against Oklahoma State and a 93-yard run against Kansas State.

The catalyst in Nebraska's explosive attack is quarterback Turner Gill, who is expected to be full speed after undergoing complicated leg surgery at the end of last season.

More offensive weapons can be found at wingback, with Irving Fryar; split end, with Todd Brown; and tight end, with Jamie Williams. Despite injuries, Williams made the All-Big Eight team.

He led the Huskers in receiving with 22 catches for 282 yards.

Anchoring a veteran NU offensive line is All-America center Dave Rimington, who is bidding to become the first two-time winner in the history of the Outland Trophy.

Defensively, Nebraska has honor candidates in tackle Toby Williams, middle guard Jeff Merrell, end Tony Felici and linebacker Steve Damkroger.

OKLAHOMA

Some things never seem to change. Barry Switzer's Sooners have another fleet stable of running backs.

Stanley Wilson, the 1981 All-Big Eight fullback, is ready to make the conversion to halfback after a successful spring experiment. Last year, he rushed for 1,008 yards. He had a 164-yard game against league champion Nebraska.

Precipitating Wilson's switch to halfback was the rapid development of freshman fullback Fred Sims, who stunned Houston with 181 yards rushing in the second half of the Sun Bowl.

Oklahoma also returns halfbacks Steve Sewell and Chet Winters.

While the Sooners return a wealth of backfield talent, they are faced with a major reconstruction task. Four starters were graduated in the offensive line.

That bad news, however, is replaced by the good news of nine returning starters on defense, including standout linebackers Thomas Benson and Jackie Shipp. Shipp recorded 182 tackles last season. Benson had 116. Coaches believe they could be the best pair of linebackers in Sooner history.

OU's defensive line is anchored by

A second Outland Trophy for Nebraska's Dave Rimington would make NCAA history.

6-4, 244-pound All-Big Eight tackle Rick Bryan. Some observers label him "another Lee Roy Selmon." Last year, he logged 118 tackles, including nine quarterback sacks.

The Sooners also return most of their secondary talent from 1981.

OKLAHOMA STATE

Although experience abounds in the offensive line and secondary, much of Oklahoma State Coach Jimmy Johnson's optimism is rooted in the strong leg of sophomore kicker Larry Roach.

Last year, he broke the NCAA record for field goals as a freshman. Among his successful 19 of 28 attempts was a school record 56-yarder against Kansas.

Leading the Cowboys' veteran offensive line is 6-5, 257-pound senior offensive tackle Russell Graham. This is his fourth year as a starter. Joining him as returning regulars are guards Kevin Igo and Paul Speight, tackle John Cegielski and center Doug Freeman.

OSU returns 10 starters on offense. They include quarterback Rusty Hilger, running back Shawn Jones, split end Mark Cromer and tight end John Chesley, who was last year's leading receiver with 26 catches for 350 yards and four touchdowns.

Among the Cowboys' seven returning defensive starters are senior noseguard Gary Lewis and senior linebacker Mike Green.

Last year, Lewis was a consensus All-Big Eight selection. He had 96 tackles, including 14 sacks for 116 yards in losses. His best game was 11 tackles and four sacks against Kansas.

Green made second team all-conference after leading the Cowboys in tackles for a second consecutive season. Last year, he was credited with 129 tackles.

Thomas Benson (38) and Jackie Shipp (49) combined for 298 tackles for Oklahoma.

What separates the champions from everyone else is the ability to duplicate their achievements.

We love to see you go home.

At Methodist, we love to see you go home. When we say goodbye, it means we have done our job and you are on your way to a healthy recovery. Occasionally, it means you have added a new baby to the family. Sometimes, you have journeyed through a debilitating illness or injury and have found strength to rejoin family and friends. We rejoice with you, for your success is our success.

Methodist Hospital, a 559-bed acute care hospital at 84th and Dodge St., offers a full range of health care services from maternity to cancer treatment, from emergency care to physical therapy.

Methodist Midtown, a post acute care facility at 36th and Cuming, provides the total realm of rehabilitation and skilled nursing care needed to recover from the physical disabilities of stroke, joint replacements, fractures, amputation and other traumatic injuries.

Midtown also houses chemical dependency services, if you or a family member have problems coping with alcohol or drug abuse.

Whether you are regaining life's momentum with open-heart surgery, overcoming the battle with cancer or recovering from the effects of a stroke, at Methodist we have become your ally, your cheerleader, your friend—and though you'll be remembered, we love to see you go home.

This Is New Mexico State

New Mexico State University has come a long way from its humble beginning in the days when New Mexico was a territory and higher education was for a very few.

It all started in 1888 as Las Cruces College. A year later the Territorial Legislature designated the university as a land-grant college under the Morrill Act and changed the name to New Mexico College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts.

The growth was steady at the campus located at Las Cruces as New Mexico A&M provided a center of learning in the broad sense that the land-grant mission of education, service and research was carried out. This service and maturity was recognized in 1960 when the constitution of New Mexico was amended to change the name to New Mexico State University.

With better than 12,000 students on the 6,250-acre main campus and another 3,000 at the four branch campuses in the state, today NMSU is a dynamic force in higher education and research. The faculty now numbers 605 in six undergraduate colleges and the Graduate School.

Undergraduate degree programs total more than 100 with one and two year programs in 14 major areas. At present there are 37 degrees at the master's level and 24 at the doctorate level.

An example of the growth at NMSU is the role it has played in research. Research at NMSU has become a leader in solar energy research to name just one area of national interest. Much work is done under federal support. The volume of work done by NMSU for the U.S. Department of Defense alone ranks NMSU tenth in the nation of the university contractors.

Cornhusker Wheel Club 1982

Automobile dealers in Nebraska are contributing a large measure of help to the University of Nebraska athletic program through the loan of courtesy cars. Like other programs which are a part of the Cornhusker booster group activities, this project enables the Nebraska Athletic Department to make greater use of its funds. These sports-minded dealers around the state have earned a debt of gratitude from the University of Nebraska Athletic Department. They are an important part of the "team" that includes players, coaches, administration, faculty, staff, students, alumni, Husker Educational Award group, Touchdown Club, Extra Point Club, Beef Club and the courtesy car program.

Nebraska's school children, teachers served well by UNL Teachers College

There's probably a relationship here.

For many years, students in Nebraska high schools have consistently outperformed students in almost every other state in their composite scores on the American College Test (ACT).

For even more years, a high proportion of the teachers in Nebraska's schools, and an even higher proportion of the state's school administrators, have received their teacher training through the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Teachers College.

Jim O'Hanlon, whom the Board of Regents named Acting Dean of Teachers College as of July 1, estimates that 30 percent of Nebraska's teachers and 60 percent of the state's school administrators are alumni of UNL Teachers College.

But it is not in quantity alone that O'Hanlon measures the contribution made to the education of Nebraska's school children by UNL trained teachers.

"We also are proud of the quality of students who enroll in Teachers College," he said. "A recent study by the National Institute of Education concluded that the caliber of students nationwide enrolled in teacher college programs was not as high as students in other fields.

Quality Students

"At UNL, however, we find our students, despite the rigorous course work, perform well, and the overall grade point average of students preparing to be teachers is consistently one of the highest averages in the University. Moreover, our entering students have been consistently higher than the national average on the ACT for students entering teacher education nationally.

"Administrators who hire Teachers College graduates as elementary or secondary teachers are highly satisfied with their skills," O'Hanlon added.

This year, approximately 2,400 students are enrolled in Teachers College. Their success rate in finding jobs in teaching will likely continue to be as satisfactory as in the past. Last year, for instance, Fred Wendel, director of the Teacher Placement Office, reported that 840 individuals obtained teaching or administrative positions through the Office—77 percent of whom remained in Nebraska to take positions in 79 of the state's 93 counties.

Seven Divisions

Recent years have seen Teachers College departments and other units reorganized into seven divisions. These include: 1) The Center for Curriculum and Instruction (a merger of the former Departments of Elementary and Secondary Education) 2) The Center for Vocational and Business Education (which provides the only comprehensive program in vocational education in the state) 3) The Barkley Center (combining the Departments of Special Education and Speech Pathology and Audiology and the Media Center for the Deaf) 4) The Department of Educational Administration 5) The Department of Adult and Continuing Education 6) The Department of Educational Psychology and Social Foundations (a merger of the former Department of Educational Psychology and Measurements with the Department of History and Philosophy of Education. 7) The School of Health, Physical Education and Recreation.

Each division of Teachers College maintains close ties with Nebraska's schools, providing many forms of continuing education and teacher assistance.

For the past several years, for instance, Teachers College has provided courses, in-service training programs and workshops which are aimed at making modern computer technology intelligible and practical for teaching students from kindergarten through high school and for more efficient performance of administrative tasks.

Ward Sybouts, director of graduate studies, research and services for UNL Teachers College, said that seven computer workshops were offered

Dorothy Stevens, assistant professor of curriculum and instruction, teaches graduate level students ways that they can utilize computers in the classroom. A number of computer workshops for teachers in districts throughout Nebraska have been offered by Teachers College for the past several years.

College of the Day

throughout the state during the past summer, continuing a service program which was started several years ago.

Through its involvement in computer training for teachers, Teachers College has taken an active role in the development of computer software for classroom and office use. It now operates a Clearinghouse for Computer Software, offering teachers and administrators throughout Nebraska educationally sound and proven software at a fraction of the cost which educators would have to pay for commercially prepared materials.

Service Projects

Other service projects offered through Teachers College include the services offered through the Barkley Center's Speech and Hearing Clinic, the alcohol and drug abuse prevention program provided through the college's School of Health, Physical Education and Recreation, and the administrator assessment program conducted through the National Association of Secondary School Principals.

UNL's Teachers College, in addition to providing many outstanding services to Nebraska, has also achieved recognition for many of its programs and activities at the national level.

The college's Department of Adult and Continuing Education was recently identified as one of the 10 best education departments in North America in a nationwide survey of adult educators.

Teacher College's School Psychology Program is but one of 11 programs which have been accredited by the American Psychological Association, and its Counseling Psychology program is only one of 25 accredited by the same association in the U.S.

UNL, because of its outstanding reputation, was chosen as the new site in 1979 of the Buros Institute, the most prestigious center in the world for the study of testing.

UNL's Media Center for the Deaf also enjoys an international reputation for its use of technology for the education of the deaf, and the Center has received special funding for its projects from federal sources every year since 1964.

Z 28. SO NEW, ITS CLOSEST COMPETITION IS ITS SHADOW.

CAST A SHADOW ULTRASLEEK.

Consider: Even with downforce-inducing air dam and spoiler, the Z28 gets a .339 coefficient of drag.

A totally redesigned suspension, front and rear, has enabled the Z28 to generate .8g-range cornering power on GM skidpads.

The ergonomically engineered cockpit looks and functions like an executive jet.

The all-new Camaro Z28. It's a unique 2+2 coupe with an unfettered spirit, an uncommon style and an unusual capacity for enhancing all but the most conservative of life-styles.

Some Chevrolets are equipped with engines produced by other GM divisions, subsidiaries, or affiliated companies worldwide. See your dealer for details.

Enter with a blur—the new Z28.

This is an all-new Camaro. Styled to leave some fine 2+2 coupes chasing shadows. With lines cleanly sculpted in a wind tunnel and enough unabashedly advanced engineering to satiate even the most demanding technophile.
